A River Runs Through It and Other Stories, By Norman Maclean, Unabridged, Narrated By Joel Fabiani Norman Maclean

"In our family, was no clear line between religion and fly fishing." This charming opening from Norman Maclean's fictional memoir. A River Runs Through It, starts the reader on a nostalgic excursion into the lives of two brothers growing up in Missoula, Montana in the 1930s. As boys, the brothers acquire the art of fly fishing from their father, an austere Presbyterian minister who mixes into his gentle, uncompromising tutelage a wealth of homespun wisdom, seasoned with "something stylish" as he buttons up the glove on his casting hand. "Izaak Walton," he informed his sons once, "was not a respectable writer." Neither boy was certain whether this had more to do with Walton's being an Episcopalian or because he had committed the ultimate transgression in preferring bait fishing to fly fishing. Paul, the younger of the two boys, soon surpasses both father and brother, proving that there is a lot more to artistry than rules and the rudiments of technique. As the undisputed authority over the river and everything that moves beneath it, Paul works the currents and holes the way a painter applies color to canvas. To the chance observer his outstretched arm has within it the lordly conviction of a Moses about to part the waters. But Paul's life off the river is as fragmented and troubled as his life on it is elemental and gracious. As he runs out of second chances, his brother labors to save him before his art becomes a memory. In addition to the title story, this audio production includes: Logging and Pimping and 'Your Pal, Jim' and USFS 1919: The Ranger, the Cook, and A Hole in the Sky "A lyrical tale of fly fishing, fighting and carousing ... which reads like a swift, unbending river current." ---Wall Street Journal "This is more than stunning fiction: it is a lyric record of a time and of a life." ---The Village Voice" (from back of case)
