Things couldn't be going any better for December Monroe. Fresh out of nursing school, she decides to pursue her dream of moving out of Orange County, California and opening a healing center. After falling head-over-heels in love with the town of San Luis Obispo and all of its charm, she wastes no time putting an offer in on a home and getting her business up and running. With the support and encouragement of her family, December feels she has finally arrived. Amidst the excitement and chaos, her long-lost first love, Bennett Carlton, walks back into her life arousing emotions in December she thought she would never feel for anyone again. She throws caution to the wind and opens her heart up to falling in love with him once more. Their life together begins to unfold like a fairytale, until tragedy strikes. In the blink of an eye, December's entire world is turned upside down, the rug ripped out from underneath her without warning. From the author of Serenity Falls comes an inspiring story about coping with grief, learning to forgive, and most importantly, finding the strength and the courage to hope again.
