A Polish-American kid and his Mien-American best friend travel to Ellis Island with the help of Jim Morrison to dig up buried comic books.

Tomek and Kao are best friends from Concord, California. Both children's parents are experiencing tough times. Tomek's parents are divorced, and his mother is planning to take Tomek back to Poland. Kao's father is losing his house to foreclosure and is moving his family out of the Bay Area.

Both children are very unhappy over having to end their friendship. But one day, Jim Morrison appears in their dreams and tells them that some valuable comics that are worth a fortune are buried on Ellis Island.

Kao and Tomek learn about a smartphone app-writing contest that guarantees them a trip to New York if they make it to the finals. With Jim's guidance, they work persistently to create an app that will get them to New York so that they can dig up those comics and relieve the economic and domestic woes of their parents.
