Getting In: Medical School Admissions Dr. Norry Kaler

Dr. Norry Kaler is a Canadian Medical Doctor who is teaching students, families, and communities about medical school admissions. Dr. Kaler's goal is to open the doors for thousands of applicants who don't understand the medical school admission process. Currently there are almost 30,000 applications a year in Canada alone for only 2200 seats. The competition is fierce. Dr. Kaler suggests that you set a goal, make a plan, have a guide, and take action. With these four steps you will be able to better navigate this long mountainous journey. Dr. Kaler talks about medical school admissions, high school planning, private schools, what universities and colleges to attend, the money involved, what courses and undergraduate degree to take, and much more. He has chapters written specifically for parents, doctors, immigrants, and students. He talks about studying medicine abroad and how it is a risky game to play. This refreshing guide finally answers the questions people have about medical school admissions and why it is so difficult. After helping numerous people obtain admission to professional programs and guide parents on career planning he decided to write this book. Throughout the book there are motivational messages that keep the reader focused and excited for more. He talks about his journey and I believe he is one of the, if not the most, qualified, person to write on the subject. Medical school costs an average of $150,000 - $250,000, your little investment in this book can save you and your family grief, time, and money. Dr. Sharona Supernault MD
